Project Summary

"Bright Future for Street Working Children" is a project that 42 youths gathered under a social issue for 7 days from Croatia, Spain, Italy, Macedonia, Romania and Turkey to develop personal skills, gain competence and obtain teamwork culture. 3 girls, 3 boys and a leader will take part from each partner country. Also half of the participants will be selected from those have fewer opportunities as social/economic or education.

As it is known, 5 main targets of Europe 2020 strategy are directly related with education, employment, social exclusion and poverty. It is desired that the youths will be informed in regard to disadvantageousness, Europe citizenship, democracy, social inclusion and the relation between education and employment, and also motivate youths in civic initiatives for social problems.

As the host organization, we had activities in collaboration with the Center of Children Working in Streets and also release academic studies as "Qualitative Research, Evaluation and Recommendation Report on Children Working in Streets and Children Working in Ankara Streets" to the public. Furthermore we had nominated this Center, which works to stop child labor, to 2014 UN Public Service Awards to gain international recognition. The center is awarded the first place among the 445 projects. In this context we believe that we will gather youths in a social issue at the right solution place.

Youths in the partner countries will make a survey in their hometowns and then they will make a comparative evaluation when they come together. They will be informed by the trainers in wooden material/toy painting, singing a song, drawing techniques and sportive activities whom will be gathered with those children at the Center of Children Working in Ankara Streets to execute these activities in groups for social inclusion those children to the life.

It is desired that the youths will become familiar with the working atmosphere with team work activities. The understanding of absolute positive impact of the contribution to human capital will be provided, as well as the importance of voting at the election and the duties of the civic society via the activities named as "flower planting", "construction" and the "evaluation box". Also it is expected that those youths will recognize their distinctive cultural values and most importantly is to become friends.

According to the statistics, an abroad experience has a positive effect on employability. In this context, it is expected that the employability chance of the youths particularly those with fewer opportunities will be increased with this project. One of the other expectation in this project is to accelerate the voluntary studies in public institutions and make contribution in eliminating the wrong perceptions and negative attitudes towards the children working in the streets.

More importantly we are gathering with those children to spend time together.

The last but not the least until 2017, we will carry out some project and activities to make a contibution on strategic targets of EU, which contains education, employment and combating with poverty. On tihs context will make a pressure to the public authorities as an NGO in order to make them to increase their efforts on using renewable energy sources and combating with climate change. Our motto is "Youth in Charge for More Powerful Civil Society".

Introduction

The announcement of the project which was held in 5 – 13 September 2015, published at Salto Youth Portal <https://www.salto-youth.net/tools/otlas-partner-finding/project/bright-future-for-street-working-children.3567> with the following information in order to find suitable partners;

Social inclusion for children working on the streets who has fewer opportunities via youth initiatives.

Children, some of which were even younger than primary school age, were often confronted with all kinds of abuse while working in the streets. Children at the age of compulsory education having to work caused setbacks or even total interruption in their education. Such environment prepared all the circumstances that push children, who were the architects of our future, to become unsociable individuals rather than presenting them a good future.

This situation affected not only the children but also other citizens who might be exposed to crime and their perception of the children working in streets.

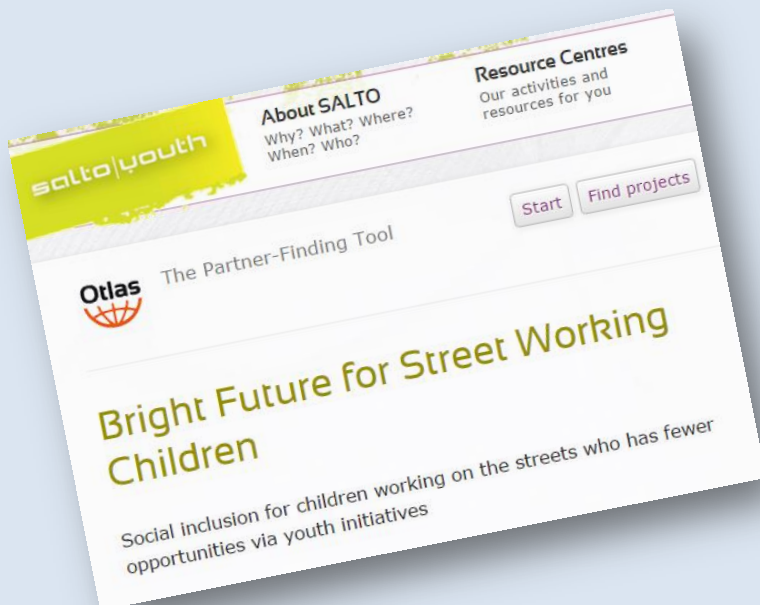

Following a detailed problem analysis, it is established that the solution could not be achieved only with precautions and banning and that at the roots of the problem lied factors arising from urban poverty caused by internal immigration.

Participating youth groups/organizations will be welcomed to make contribution on these children social inclusion via playing with them, creating wooden toys, painting, singing and sport activities.

3rd Team: History of the Survey

- Prepared the survey in July,
- Send the survey to all the cultural association involved in the project,
- After that the survey was sent to every participant
- Every seven member group had to fill in 50 questionnaires about people knowledge of street working children
- People from very diverse environment were asked to fill the questionnaires
- This people were selected between our friends, colleagues, family, internet and random people on the street.
- Once the surveys are filled in, each national group analyzed the results of the questionnaires and prepared a presentation to show the main conclusion to other groups.
- Finally all of us we met together and shared our ideas to sum up the conclusions we had.

4th Team: Observations while Questionnaires are being made

In this article we will try to explain what the reactions were and what feelings were shown by the people who did the survey. The survey was done mainly with our relatives, colleagues from job or with our friends. Topic of "Street working children" is not very familiar in every country, so that is the main reason why we collected different reactions and feelings. By analyzing the reactions of people, we can get better picture of general feeling of some country about our main topic – "Street working children".

Generally, we noticed that respondents were excited to fill the questionnaire, but we want to emphasize that they were mostly well educated and open-minded people willing to take part in our survey, so they might not reflect the average viewpoint of our particular societies. We also noticed that those respondents that had a negative encounter with children working in the streets felt disgusted/ afraid of them and had a slightly negative attitude towards them, unlike the ones that just saw them and had no or little contact with them – among them this subject created a feeling of sadness, but the general reaction wasn't as emotionally strong.

When it comes to concrete questions that caught our attention, while discussing this aspect of our research, the following questions are the most relevant ones: A feeling of shame was caused in the case of questions 2 (Do you know what is the lowest age allowed to work in your country?) and 16 (Do you have any idea to support those children in order not to have early school leaves or fall behind of his/her peers?) due to the lack of knowledge and a feeling of helplessness when it comes to finding solutions and means to helping the children. We noticed that most of our respondents had mixed feelings towards answering 8th question (How do you feel when/if you come across with those children?), since it created a strong emotional reaction that was hard to describe. Often they had a need to pick all of the available answers to that question. On the other hand, the ones that gave a positive answer to the 10th question (Have you ever given money or any food or beverages to those children or will you give if you see those children at any street you pass?) had a feeling of guilt, because they're aware of the fact that what they did or might to doesn't solve the problems nor the hard situation these children are going through.

In conclusion, during our research work, we found that there were a few questions that caused stronger emotional reactions that we were able to notice. However, it's important to notice that these were only our subjective impressions that shouldn't be treated in the same manner as the actual statistics our survey resulted in.

5th Team: National/international wide press release

YE "Bright Future for Street Working Children"

As a programme oriented on bringing the European community closer through the process of mobility, covers various areas and one of them is Youth Exchange. Through this programme, the citizens of urope are able to participate in different projects organized by non-governmental organizations whose main goals are focused on improving the awareness of difficulties of the people faced with.

This specific YE was focused on raising the concciousness regarding the children coming from bad conditionas that they are forced to work on the street in order to support their families.

As all of use were coming from different countries, we found out the project in different ways. Some of us were included in volunteering work from before, some of us found outh through facebook or from our friends..

However, all of us had the same motivation to help the children who have no influence on their living conditions. But our expectations were bigger, we were challanged by an unknownn environment and excited about meeting new people and cultures. Also, one of the benefits was the opportunity to improve our language skills.

Focusing on hte main aim of the project, we spent a lot of time working with children. Erasmus+ helped us to become aware of the poor situations of the children in Turkey and the different perspective of their peers in other participant countries. Spending time with children, making sport activities, painting and making music we realized that these children need attention of adults who could provide some guidance and support. We truly believe in the benefit of the Erasmus+ initiative and we are happy we were able to participate in this youth exchange.
